to buy drugs, is the cheap way. If medicine is to cure the sick, it must be the best and purest, and skill and experience are also necessary in the art of compounding physicians' prescriptions. ## OAKLEDGE REUNION.

Banquet and Speeches at Lexington,
Attended by Young and Old—
Stories of Raids, Ghosts and Sea-sickness Create Lots of Fun.

Of Oakledge days, my dear,
We'll never forget till we grow grey
The joys of Oakledge days.

Such was the chorus which inspired the attendants at the Oakledge reunion at A. O. U. W. hall in Lexington, Thursday evening. There were nearly 100 persons present to renew acquaintances and to review events at the island resort along the coast of Maine, which has proven so attractive to many Lexington people as well as others. Young and old were there, although the older ones would make even themselves appear young again, and all entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. At 7 o'clock supper was announced in the lower hall, and there the tables had been set with a quantity of good things to eat. Caterer Janelle provided for the company, and R. A. Clark and Mrs. Emma L. Hovey superintended the dinner.

Rev. J. H. Cox, when the edibles tempted the company no longer, turned the affair into a more formal one by officiating as toastmaster of the occasion and calling upon several in turn to speak. He had the guests a hearty welcome, and expressed the hope that the reunions might continue many years. Miss Ethel Cox then sang a verse of the Oakledge song, and was followed by Paul Greenwood, who gave the next verse, and in both cases the company joined in the chorus to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

Other verses followed from time to time, which were much appreciated. Then Fred Copenweath, of Boston, was introduced and made some pleasing remarks concerning Oakledge. D. F. Hutchinson, of Lexington, who was called upon as the hunter of the party, said everyone knew he couldn't shoot, and he found out himself last summer, and he couldn't shoot. He told of experiences shooting a rifle from a boat and expressed the hope that he might yet shoot his first duck. H. L. Moore was invited to speak on the subject "Babes in the woods," but he dodged the issue, although it was announced by the toastmaster that Mr. Moore and a young lady, who was present, had been lost in the woods. Mr. Moore then spoke of his lung power. Miss Nellie Penn, of Lowell, gave an entertaining sketch of a night raid on the annex, telling of the girls in the vicinity storming the annex with stones, pans and cans one dark night, of a chase by the men, and how one of the pursuers hugged a tree thinking it was a girl. Her remarks were very amusing. W. L. C. of Lowell, was to tell how the raid was repelled, but the subject was a rather sore one for the men folks and the speech was brief.

George H. Roberts, of Lexington, gave an interesting description of a fall fishing trip, which was replete with personal anecdotes and hits on himself and other members of the party, especially on the other members of the company. Miss Maud Pullen, of Cambridge, convulsed the company with a paper on "Seasickness: Its Cause, Effect and Cure." Her experience in a boat along with the experiences of several others furnished a treat for all. Some of the young couples were described when in the depths of misery caused by seasickness, and mentioned that one man held a young lady's hand because he couldn't hold anything else. Paul Franks, Percy Glenn and Ernest Feenstra, of "Do Not Cry, Ma Honey," with Miss Alice Williams accompanying them upon the violin.

The party then adjourned to the upper hall where singing and other amusements were indulged in. Misses Agnes Packard and Margaret Tupper gave a piano duet, and Miss Alice Williams gave whistling and violin solos in a very pleasing manner. Through the night was one long to be remembered by all.

A telegram was received during the evening from F. E. Clark, of Hancock street, who read a long and interesting crowd for Oakledge. Mr. Clark was at Berlin, N. H., and unable to be present. Chief C. H. Franks, who was chairman of the committee of arrangements, was unable to be present on account of official duties.

Among those present were: Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Cox, Rev. F. A. Macdonald, Rev. and Mrs. G. N. Fuller, Mrs. Agnes Packard, Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts, Byron Steele, Ethel Cox, Paul Greenwood, Chas. A. Hutchinson, Mrs. F. E. Flood, of Lancaster, Mrs. C. S. Lemont and Miss Jennie Lemont, of Haverhill, Miss Julia Stearns, Miss Nellie Penn and N. W. Hope, of Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Miss Alice Moore and sister, Miss Marion Wyatt, Miss Maud Pullen of Cambridge, Fred Copenweath and Miss Lewis, of Boston, Miss Matilda Meloud, of New Bedford, and sister, Mrs. F. E. Franks, of Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Cox, Mrs. Greenwood and sons of South Billerica, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Frizelle, Chester Hutchinson, Mrs. Geo. N. Frizelle, and daughters, Mrs. Geo. N. Frizelle, Carl Lind, Lee and Amy Butler, Mrs. C. H. Franks, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Hutchinson, Edwin W. Hutchinson, Miss Alice M. Hutchinson, Miss Lizette Roberts, Miss Edith M. Cox, Miss Alice Williams, Willard Croe, Percy Glenn, Eddie McLeod, John McLeod, Everett Wellington, Paul Franks, Nina Simonds, Margaret Tupper, Agnes Packard, Morton Nourse, Florence Thibault, Thibault, Grace Roberts, Nellie M. Leed, Ora Lyons, Bernice Glenn, Richard Streeter, Ruth Darrell, Bertha Hemfield, Merion Roberts, Wallace Miller, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Spaulding.

TEN YEARS A SLAVE.

Mrs. William Scott, of Clinton county, Missouri, gave an interesting address on Sunday evening in Grand Army hall, before the National Soldiers' society. Mrs. Scott, who is a colored lady, was born in 1855, and remained a slave until 1865. For several years she was employed in the public schools of the south as a teacher. For the last few years she has been engaged in traveling and lecturing in the interest of the Western college at Macon, her native place. She is now in the employment of the American Home Baptist Mission society lecturing in behalf of the education of her people. Mrs. Scott is a pleasing speaker, and greatly interested her audience. She emphasized the loyalty and fidelity of the negro to his master during all the long years of the rebellion. She spoke at length of his religious faith and his loving obedience to government. Mrs. Scott said much in detail of what is now being done in educating her race.

YOUNG MEN'S LEAGUE.

A number of young working men, many of whom live at the Heights, have formed the Young Men's League for social improvement.
As an enlargement of their first intentions, for the sake of placing their work on a firmer financial basis, they have undertaken to give an entertainment next Tuesday in the town hall. Its character will be adapted to Y. M. C. A. methods, and it is expected that some Y. M. C. A. workers will speak of the life and interest. A number of the members of the league have been in Y. M. C. A.s, and they have secured a large company of the best and brightest talent. The entertainment promises to be a grand one, and already been sold to guarantee ample success.

Belmont and Waverley

The Enterprise is for sale in Belmont and Waverley by F. N. La Bonte, Belmont; Connor's News Store, Waverley; Waverley Cafe, Waverley.

BELMONT.

Rev. S. K. Beach, of Bangor, Me., preached at the Unitarian church last Sunday. Rev. Augustus M. Lord, of Providence, R. I., will preach tomorrow morning.

A Belmont young man, when hurrying for a train one morning this week, stopped upon noticing a lobster moving along the street a few feet from the neck of a cat. Investigation proved that the animal had got its head in the can but could not withdraw it, but after about five minutes' labor on the part of the young man, who, by the way, is not a member of the society with the long name, the feline was extricated.

The selectmen will meet next Tuesday evening, and draw up a town meeting warrant. Persons having any articles for the warrant must have them presented on or before that meeting.

At the bowling tournament on the alleys of the Belmont club, Tuesday evening, Melsel's team won two out of three from Walcott's team.

The caucus to make up the ballot for town meeting will be held in the town hall, Tuesday, Feb. 12.
On Monday evening, Feb. 10, the parishioners of St. Joseph's church will hold their second grand reunion in town hall. The affair promises to be a grand success. A splendid concert by artists of well known ability will be given at 8 o'clock. Frank Hollis, Boston's young and favorite baritone, will sing some of his famed ballads and for one hour this feast of music will continue. The grand march at 9 will open the social exercises, and then dancing until two o'clock. Matrons and misses will dispense refreshments during the evening. Those who attend are assured of a pleasant time.

The lecture and entertainment given under the auspices of the Belmont Hospital Aid society in the town hall, last Friday evening, was a success in every way; financially, when we realize that over $100 was netted. The program consisted of a musical number by Mrs. N. Swift and Miss Adelaide Swift, contralto solo, Mrs. Parker, soprano solo, Miss Edith M. Nassau, and lecture, "Garris in Life and a Buffalo Hunt," by Mrs. Custer, widow of Gen. Custer. Mrs. Custer was an interesting teller of her experiences. The audience included many Belmont and Waverley people and about 20 members of post 35, G. A. R., who attended in a body.

Mrs. Viola Davis, of School street is to leave Monday for California.

The K. K. C. of Lowell held a hart party at the home of C. J. Hernandez, on Pleasant street last evening. This is a secret society, formed among the school boys, and their first social has been one of eager anticipation for them. The piano at the high school was used this week.

The semi-annual nomination of officers of the Belmont High School Literary and Debating society took place Wednesday morning, before the regular meeting of the society. The following candidates were nominated: President, Harry C. Stearns, Harold I. Brown, Harry A. Slade; vice president, Sarah Diaz, Henry Lincoln, Paul Smith; secretary, Daniel Johnson; treasurer, Robert Davis. The amendment recently adopted by the society went into force for the first time Wednesday. This amendment provides among other things for prize speaking contests, athletic meets, prize essays, and each debate could have two points for the winning side. The subject for the first debate under the new arrangement was: "Resolved that the traffic in intoxicating drinks should be prohibited." Ross's side took the negative and Olive Reed's the affirmative. The speakers on the affirmative were Charles Runey, Maud Lamont, Henry Lincoln; on the negative, Robert Stearns, Edward Lincoln, and Edward Brown. It proved to be the best debate yet held by the society. The judges decided in favor of the negative.

In an article in an evening edition of a Boston daily, Thursday, in reference to a proposition heard before the election laws committee, to enable tax-paying women to vote in municipal elections, Mrs. Abby Moron Diaz and Mrs. Mary Homer were among those in favor of the proposition, while Mrs. E. P. Atkins was among those who feared "dire results from such a measure."

T. J. Burke, G. K., and E. J. Lonn, P. G. K., attended the state convention of the K. of C. at Dartmouth hall, Boston, Tuesday.

Waverley Tennis club minstrels at Waverley hall, Thursday evening, Feb. 12.

A team composed of past members of the girls' basketball teams of the Dedham high school defeated the Belmont high team, Saturday afternoon, at Memorial hall, Dedham, by a score of 27 to 8. The visitors were much smaller, but played creditably. The best work was done by Misses Wagner, Fisher and Sweeney for Dedham and Diaz and Langley for Belmont.

WAVERLEY.

Each of two visitors to Boston, Wednesday night, saw a watch out because he did not watch out for pickpockets when he got in a crowd. There was a light on Standard street at 1.30 o'clock. Arthur Irwin, of Merose, had a gold-filled, open-face watch and Royal R. Bates, of Trapelo road, Waverley, was the possessor of an open-face silver watch when they mixed in with a crowd, but neither man had a watch when the crowd melted away. The men reported their losses at station 3, but they were not optimistic concerning their chances of getting the watches back. There was a gang of hoodlums in the West End who make a practice of starting fights between two of their number and the rest pick the pockets of those who stop to see the made-to-order row.

Friends of Albert Jennings, ex-town treasurer of Waverley, who is awaiting trial on charges of larceny of $5,000 of the town's money, have had him examined by Dr. G. F. Jelly of Boston, and Dr. Cowles, superintendent of the City Hospital at Waverley, to determine his mental condition. They report that he is insane.

Be sure and attend the Unitarian social to be held in Waverley hall, Wednesday, Feb. 12, under the auspices of the Ladies' Union society.

John Peterson, Jr., who was arrested last Saturday night for alleged complicity in the wholesale stealing from the Boston & Maine Railroad Co., lived in West Watertown about a year. Peterson was born in Sweden about 27 years ago. His family came from that country about 20 years ago, and located in Waltham. His education was obtained in the schools of that city. He entered the employ of the Fitchburg railroad as an office boy and was later promoted to the car department, a position he held up to his arrest. His father and brother are employed by the Boston & Maine company and have been for many years. A few years ago, the family came to Waverley to live, and lived here until they moved to West Watertown, about a year ago. In Waverley the prisoner made many friends and they were very much surprised to learn of his arrest, as he was regarded as a man

CAMBRIDGE HOGS.

Well Deserved Title Soon to be Applied Unless Relief Comes Quickly.

Arlington People Crowded and Squeezed in Arlington
Cars—Cambridge Residents Let Their Cars Pass By—
Make Life Miserable for Themselves and Others.

The manner in which Cambridge residents and particularly those who live between North Cambridge Junction and Harvard square impose upon Arlington and Lexington people who ride in electric cars is coming to be not only inexcusable, but perfectly unbearable. Although there are North Cambridge cars which even during the busy hours of the day are seldom if ever filled with passengers, the Arlington Heights cars are crowded like so many cattle pens, and the crowding is due in 99 cases out of 100 to Cambridge people. After the car leaves the North Cambridge car barn it usually contains a good comfortable load of passengers bound for Arlington, the Heights or Lexington, but even then there is no great comfort riding because of the foul air caused by the hundred or more persons who were huddled together for the longest half of the run.

The crowding of the Arlington cars by Cambridge people has been a source of much complaint for a long time, but it was not until Monday night that an effort was made to investigate the situation by an Enterprise reporter. He waited for a car near Central square in Cambridgeport, between 11 and 11.30 o'clock, and two North Cambridge cars sped past. One of them was from Dudley street and contained but four passengers. The second was from the subway and but six forlorn North Cambridge people were seated on the cushions. And next came the Arlington car! The Enterprise man made a grab for the rear platform, managed to get as far as the step, and there he stayed for some little time. The seats were crowded beyond their limit, standing room in the car was limited to about a square foot for each individual, and both the front and rear platforms were packed. Occasionally a whiff of the atmosphere from within wafted out within reach of the reporter's nose, and it almost knocked him off the step. He leaned over the step for fear he would catch another whiff. And while he leaned he pondered. How a human being inside the car could stand such an atmosphere was a mystery, although he expressed himself to the effect that Cambridge "hogs" were trying to get accustomed to a muggy atmosphere.

Between Central square and Harvard square thirteen people made their exit. At the latter transfer station six people were counted to alight and others may have escaped the cushions. And next came the Arlington car, walk on other people's toes and be walked on in turn, rather than take a North Cambridge car and ride with comfort to themselves and their neighbors of an adjoining town. After the 85 had made their departure the car was then comfortably well filled but that dreadful air remained.

Since the investigation the reporter made inquiries of conductors and motormen as to whether this was really a common occurrence, or did it happen to be so just when the reporter chanced to take the car. In every instance he was told that it was a regular thing, that Cambridge people would as a rule wait in the subway, allow a North Cambridge car to slip by and then make a grand rush in a bunch for the transport marked Arlington Heights, as if to ride with Arlington people was an exceptional pleasure.

There are two ways which appear to the Enterprise reporter as a possible means to stop this decided nuisance. The first is to solicit the Cambridge newspapers to reproduce this article in full, and to explain to the people of Cambridge that a North Cambridge car from the subway will take them to the car barn, near the North Cambridge junction, as quick time and as comfortably as an Arlington Heights car; and the second plan, in case the first one fails, is for all Arlington people to agree that when there has been such a jam and a person leaves the car before it passes the North Cambridge car barn to salute them, with the appellation "Cambridge hogs." It is believed this will tend to shame them, if they refuse to patronize their own cars after a polite request. If the second plan does not prevail, perhaps someone will be able to invent a scheme which will.

The railway people are not to blame in the matter although some of the very Cambridge people were growling Monday night because there were not more cars, when they themselves are alone responsible for the condition of affairs.

HE WILL REMAIN.

Rev. Frederic Gill Decides to Continue as Pastor of Unitarian Church of Arlington.

Rev. Frederic Gill is to continue as pastor of the Unitarian church of Arlington despite the rumors of a resignation which have been circulated during the past six months. The feeling among the church people being strong against any such resignation, Mr. Gill decided to abide by their wishes. At the church service, Sunday morning, Mr. Gill said, in a pleasant, appreciative way, that having learned through the parish committee of the substantial unanimity concerning his pastoral work, and thanking his people for their encouragement and helpfulness, he would continue as their pastor, trusting that, with united effort, the future of the church shall emphasize its commendable past.

The reception given Rev. Mr. Gill, Thursday evening, in the parlors of the church, was in every way enjoyable. Many friends of Mr. Gill, aside from those of his own church and society, greeted him with a hand-shake and a pleasant word.

The following were the reception committee: Mrs. J. Q. A. Brackett, Mrs. James A. Bailey, Mrs. S. G. Damon, Mrs. C. A. Dennett, Mrs. Marshall F. Rice, Mrs. Harry W. Bullard, Mrs. F. Hicks, Mrs. J. C. Harris, Mrs. Arthur Wellington, Miss Carrie Robbins, Miss Alberta Bott, Miss Nellie Smith, Miss Esther Bailey and Mrs. William G. Rice. Committee on refreshments: Mrs. H. Porter, Mrs. W. H. N. Francis, Mrs. H. B. Pierce, Mrs. C. A. Dennett and Mrs. E. P. Bryant. Committee on decorations: Miss Nellie Hodgdon, Miss Nellie Smith, Miss Alice Homer, Miss Ethel Homer, Miss Florence Harris, Mrs. Charles Hardy.

Weston's orchestra, West Medford, discoursed its best music.

Five initiations and eight propositions for membership was the order at the meeting of Court Pride of Arlington, F. of A., Monday evening.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. It furnishes a radical change from the routine of constant thinking in regular channels for it brings into use a diversity of thoughts entirely foreign thereto and therefore recreative in character. Besides, it affords much wholesome physical exercise otherwise. Our pool-room at No. 491 Mass. Ave., Arlington, is a retreat for those who would, for a brief time, drive dull care away. It is kept in the most orderly manner and we solicit the patronage of gentlemen. We have no room for idlers or loungers of a social class who cannot mingle with gentlemen.

THE SPEAKING VOICE.

Its Use For Everyday Purposes and Why It Pleases or Irritates.

The voice reflects the whole nature of a person when uncontrolled. No sick person can talk like one who is well, although an actor who is in perfect health can assume the tones of one who is sick. It is very difficult for a person when angry to speak in pleasant tones, for anger corrugates and hardens the throat, just as pleasure softens and mellows it. The fixed timbre of an habitually cross individual is rough and guttural, and this is called a fixed nature, while the temporary timbre of one who is angry for the moment gives rise to the fugitive nature in the voice.

Herein we find the cause of so many disagreeable voices in the common habits of life. The scold of the household, whether man or woman, son or daughter, develops the scraping, harsh, grating, guttural or metallic sound that takes all the pleasure out of life and makes the beautiful face a sad disappointment when interpreted in speech, and in time the same nervous influences that destroyed the richness of the voice will some day transform the fair lines of the features into sharp angles and sour expression, and the stamp of nature's first intentions will be effaced by the weeds of habit. The voice is trained by its daily use. Habit is its teacher.

Not only does the timbre of every voice reflect character and fugitive moods, but the force used, the part of the scale employed, the speed of utterance and many other details are the result of constant influences. A woman's voice is supposed to range about one octave higher than the average male voice. This means that she produces twice as many sound vibrations per second. Tone is a nervous sensation made upon the brain of the hearer by air vibrations made rapidly enough to give the effect which is called noise or sound. It does not exist in fact. But the vibrations are real, and they pound upon that sensitive organ the ear, and a woman deals twice as many blows per second as a man.

Under excitement, whether of scolding or of rapid conversation or animated address, any person is sure to raise the pitch nearly an octave. This means a doubling of the blows upon the ear nerves leading to the brain. Add to this an increase of force and of nervous energy in the speaker and you have a process of tormenting that has no equal in the burdens of home life. The scolding voice is always a source of irritation. It may drive a person almost to distraction. It pierces the brain like sharp instruments driven with great speed and gives actual pain to that organ. On the same principle the habitual use of a high pitch is most tiresome. Many men love their wives at all other times except when they speak. To love and long for the society of a woman who uses a high pitched voice is contrary to all nature. It is a physical impossibility to cherish that which gives constant pain. Affection speaks always in gentle tones, in tender voice and in a low key. A rising scale is on the way to a scream, and the approach or suggestion of a scream is a mark of distress.

The user of the kind of voice just described is sure to waste an equal amount of life energy. She is compelled to listen to herself and is also subjected to the consequent irritation of brain and nervous force. It requires twice the life energy to produce twice the number of vocal vibrations. As may be easily ascertained, all persons who use high pitched voices are irritable, nervous and weak after such efforts.

While modulation requires the use of all the notes of the voice, there is a general average above and below which the movement of modulation should play, and the lower this average is the more beautiful and pleasing will the voice become.

In everyday life most persons use one note in speaking. It is very irritating, just as annoying as would be the use of one note on a piano. No matter how beautiful the tone, the incessant employment of one note in the scale is unendurable. The brain shrinks from all monotony. If you listen to voices that are otherwise beautiful and catch the one note tone, you will be affected just as you would be by listening to a musical instrument that gives sound only in one note.

Like every product of nature, the voice should not be allowed to run to weeds, but should be kept under cultivation.—Edmund Shaftesbury in Good Housekeeping.

Onions Attractively Prepared.
Any large white onion can be stuffed, but what are known as Spanish onions are usually selected for this purpose. Take those about three inches in diameter, cut off the tops and scoop out the centers; then parboil for five minutes. After draining they are ready to be filled. The stuffing may be of fine breadcrumbs, boiled rice, chopped raw or cooked meat. Whatever the chosen basis, it should be highly seasoned and moistened with a little melted butter. After filling the onions and putting one-half of a teaspoonful of butter on the top of each they are placed in a baking pan, stock poured in until about an inch deep and baked in a moderate oven for an hour or more.—Table Talk.

SUBWAY EXPLOSIONS.

Commenting upon the explosion in the New York subway, an editorial in the Herald suggests an unpleasant thought concerning the proposal that a subway instead of an elevated road shall be built here in Cambridge. The editorial points out the striking fact that the construction of a subway seems almost certain to be accompanied by some sort of a disastrous explosion, causing loss of life as well as damage to property. The danger of explosion arises from at least two important sources; one of these is the necessary use of substances that are in themselves highly explosive, and the other is the dangerous explosive combination formed by air and illuminating and other gases likely to be encountered under the surface of streets. During the progress of construction there exists a possible and constantly threatening danger to adjacent property, and to persons and vehicles passing on the streets under which operations are being carried forward. Those having the work in charge realize that the risk which they run on account of the loss of life and property is exceedingly great; indeed, it may be said that fatalities are an almost absolute certainty, and that the contractor's risk is not so much a question as to whether or not there will be a loss of life and injury to property, but rather the question resolves itself into a speculation as to the probable extent and frequency of such unfortunate occurrences. [Cambridge Chronicle.]

THE NEW BOSTON SUBWAY.

The unfairness of the referendum, sometimes, is seen in the bill for a new subway in Washington street, which becomes operative only when approved by Boston voters. If only Bostonians were interested in it, or affected by it, there would be no objection to this, but it affects all the suburbs, for the new subway is to connect with the old one, Cambridge people, for instance,—thousands of them—will want to ride in it, but will have no voice in deciding whether it shall be built or not. That will be determined solely by Boston voters. In this decision, the voter who rarely if ever rides in the cars (and there are scores of thousands of them in Boston) will be as influential as the one who needs the new method of getting to and from business. The new subway will be very important as a factor in the prosperity of the city, affecting its larger values, but the voter who has no property interests, who knows nothing about those of others and cares nothing about them, may decide the question. The referendum has its place, and can be applied, properly, in many cases, but those with whom it is a fad make no discriminations, and apply it in the most absurd way, sometimes.

SUCCESSFUL HARVARD.

President Eliot's annual report upon the affairs of Harvard university has always been an interesting document, and that of this year follows this rule. Though not designed primarily to glorify the university or to boast of its success, one cannot become familiar with the facts presented without having increasing respect for the masterly administration which has accomplished the results which have been secured. Steady increase in the number of students in the face of a constantly rising standard of admission and a maintenance of high standards of scholarship, is the strongest possible testimony to the position of Harvard in the educational world. Cambridge has no organic relations with the university, but it takes great satisfaction in its success.

"OLD HOME WEEK."

The legislature is considering a resolution looking to the observance of "Old Home Week," after the fashion set by New Hampshire and followed by Maine and Vermont. Massachusetts has many thousands of citizens who were reared elsewhere, but it has given as freely as it has received. All over the country are to be found men and women who have gone out from the Old Bay State. They have done much for the communities in which they live, and many of them are prosperous. A movement which will bring them back on visits to the Home state will be very pleasant in its results, and may be profitable in many ways. The suggestion should receive hearty support.

The suburban newspapers, including the Enterprise, are greatly indebted to Patrolman J. J. Crowley, of station 5, Boston, for recently running down an advertising fraud in the person of Harry W. Bell, who was conducting an extensive swindling game. To the officer's promptness and skill is due the apprehension of Bell and his speedy conviction. If all the members of the Boston police force were as attentive to duty and as conscientious about their work as Officer Crowley, there would be no occasion for the criticisms we so often hear thrown out concerning the Boston police.

The business of the John P. Squire Co. may now be expected to take on an unprecedented boom, with Alvin Sortwell at its head. The company has made a wise selection for its president.

SORTWELL IS PRESIDENT.

At the meeting of the directors of John P. Squire & Co., last week, at the company's office, 40 North Market street, Boston, one new director was added to the board—Alvin F. Sortwell, of Cambridge. C. Minot Weld resigned from the presidency, stating that his duties as president of the New National Suffolk bank would require his entire time for the present. Mr. Weld, however, remains on the board of directors. Mr. Sortwell was elected to fill the vacancy. At the annual meeting of the company, held in Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 21, the old board of officers was re-elected. It was practically understood that the re-organization was effected in December, that Mr. Weld accepted the presidency as a temporary expedient until such time as a suitable man could be secured. Mr. Sortwell has assumed active charge of the business as its official head, and will give much of his time to its direction. If run on its 24-hour capacity the Squire plant can care for 35,000 hogs every week, and is now killing half of that number. It is the policy of the new management, as re-organized, to push the business as fast as possible, maintaining, of course,

"PITIFUL WALKOVER."

Recently Rev. Peter MacQueen spoke in the West End Presbyterian church, New York. He denounced the war in the Transvaal, and sharply criticized some of the actions of Americans in the Philippines. He said that Senator Hoar had quoted his interview with Lawton in the senate last week, and had expressed doubt of its authenticity. Mr. MacQueen declared that Mr. Fritchett, of San Francisco, had been a witness of the interview. He challenged Hon. John Parrott to produce the letter which the latter said he received from Lawton. To a reporter Mr. MacQueen said: "The interview with Lawton was never denied by the general. Gen. Schwan is reported to have denied it. But Gen. Schwan was in America when the interview occurred. This is how I happened to get the interview. Mr. Collins, the agent for the Associated Press in Manila, asked me to go over and get the general's opinions on the war in July, 1899. I did so, and sent the result to Mr. Collins. 'Then, six weeks afterward, I wrote home to the Congressionalists the same interview, believing that Collins had used it for the great dailies which his concern represented. It had not, however, been used, and when it appeared in the Congressionalists the Boston agent for one of the great news concerns telegraphed it pretty widely. 'The words Lawton used were exactly the following: 'We want to stop this damnable war.' Seeing that I looked surprised, he exclaimed: 'Yes, you are a clergyman, but I repeat, the damnable war.' It is time for diplomacy, for negotiation. These people have some rights. I like a good fight, but I don't enjoy this pitiful walkover.'"

COUNTY TRUANT SCHOOL.

According to the report of Superintendent M. A. Warren of the Middlesex County Truant school, at Chelmsford, ninety boys were admitted to the institution during the year, and on Dec. 31, 1901, 134 boys were members of the school. Seventy-six were discharged during the year. Of those committed, eighty-one were habitual truants. Of those released sixty-one were discharged by expiration of sentence, fourteen were released upon probation, and one died. Of the number committed, seventy-one could read and write, two could only read, and seventeen could neither read nor write. The current expenses for the year amounted to $20,822.42, or $3.17 per capita per week. The amount collected and paid to the county treasurer from fines and towns for the support of pupils was $688.83, and from sundry receipts $27.06. There is due from cities and towns for support of pupils $256.28, making a total of $7011.22. The net cost per capita was $2.11 per week.

HOME HANDICRAFT.

A Suggestion For Making a Novel and Handsome Chair.

A blending of the artistic and the practical usually commends itself to the home furnisher, and consequently a suggestion which may be new to some of us for a useful substitute for upholstery on a chair frame will be welcome. As the sketch below at once reveals, the suggestion in question consists in the covering of the seat and the back of a chair with interlacing thongs instead of the usual upholstery or cane. Chairs like these are made by the Dutch farmers in South Africa, who have both for harness and other purposes a great use for strong leather thongs.

For the frame it seems unnecessary to make any suggestion. There are often in the lumber room old chairs which, because the webbing beneath the seat or the cover of the back has given way, have been relegated to the limbo for things "which may come in." One of these frames must be raked out, dusted and the seat and back destroyed so far as the stuffing or padding is concerned. Old nails or screws will have to be extracted and the woodwork thoroughly cleaned. Then, before the leather straps are thought of, we shall have to stain or paint the wood in some way. The most correct way to treat the wood would be to stain a dark oak color, in which case the leather can be used in its natural buff shade. However, those who prefer more fancy coloring can follow their own inclination.

The frame stained, the thongs of leather will be obtained. They can either be cut, say, from pigskin or might be rough straps. However, the more patent the rough preparation of these thongs the better. They will all be wetted thoroughly to stretch them and brought over the edges of the chair and fastened with bright brass studs in the way shown. Little pompons can be sewed on to the extremities to give a finish. When the leather has become dry, it will contract and so tighten up all over the network. This has the advantage of making the seat comfortable without being given to sagging. When the leather does begin to sag, by the way, the brass studs can be extracted and the leather wetted and restretched.

Chocolate Filling For Cake.

Plain chocolate filling is made as follows: Two and a half squares of chocolate, one cup of powdered sugar, three tablespoonsful of milk, the yolk of one egg and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Melt the chocolate in a double boiler, add half of the sugar and milk, stir until it is perfectly smooth, then add the remainder of the sugar and milk with the yolk of the egg. Cook in the double boiler until it thickens, then remove from the fire. When cold, spread between the layers and on top of the cake.

Peppermint Wafers.

Pour half a cupful of cold water over two cupfuls of granulated sugar, stir well together, then place on the fire and melt, stirring until the sugar is dissolved, but no longer. Boil exactly ten minutes. Remove from the fire, add three drops of oil of peppermint and stir until the candy becomes creamy. Drop on oiled paper, and allow the wafers to stand for twenty-four hours. These wafers usually relieve slight flatulence and some other simple stomach disorders, and most people like them.

For Fancy Dress and Weddings.

Two taking boy costumes, either for fancy dress or for a bride's page, are shown. First is the Georgian in white satin, with broadcated vest edged with silver tinsel braid, with which are worn

English fancy costume for boys. A jabot and cuffs of lace. The second is a page's costume for a wedding, in white satin, with sleeves slashed with pink, cape lined with pink and having pink bows, while silver tinsel braid edges the collar and cuffs of lace.

New classes are being formed in Somerville, Cambridge, Arlington and Arlington Heights, to begin lessons the weeks of Feb. 3 and Feb. 10. This system was the first of its nature in the United States and Canada to be endorsed by musicians and adopted in musical institutions, and to receive favorable criticism from musical critics. A mother, speaking with much feeling, expressed it as her firm conviction that the Fletcher method of teaching music was the greatest boon in the direction of child education since the wonderful work of Froebel. ### THE TOWN MEETING.

The New England town meeting is the chief corner stone of our Republican form of government. It is a proclamation of equal rights. It is the assurance that each individual man has the right to himself. It is the field day of a sovereign people. In that day no man has the right to ask you "why," provided you cast an intelligent ballot. The annual town meeting should always bring out a full vote, for to cast an intelligent ballot is not only a privilege, but it is equally a duty.

REV. MR. GILL TO REMAIN.

Rev. Frederic Gill, of Arlington, as will be seen in another column, is to remain as pastor of the Unitarian church, and for this decision which he has reached, not only his own church and society will be glad, but the town of Arlington will be glad as well. Mr. Gill, during his ten years' residence in Arlington, has much endeared himself to her people. Scholarly in his attainments and honest in his convictions, he has gone out and in before his people as a living example of what he preaches.

THE CEMETERY QUESTION AGAIN.

The cemetery question will come again before the people of Arlington at the approaching town meeting. The Enterprise has never seen any reason why a portion of the cemetery should not be set off to the Roman Catholics as requested. It can be easily understood that it would be a matter of great convenience that the Catholic church had the privilege of consecrating their grounds for the dead at one and the same time. The granting of this request could in no wise establish a dangerous precedent, as some assert, for with the granting of the request there would go not the least inconvenience or annoyance to any individual or religious body. In these days of general intelligence and good feeling, there is no room for prejudice or bigotry. As this cemetery question is to be submitted to the people of Arlington through the Australian ballot, it may be expected there will be a fair and impartial vote had thereon.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Why all this demonstration which is being made for the coming reception of Prince Henry to this country? What does it mean? Why such a furor concerning the coming coronation of King Edward VII? Are the American people ready to drop on their knees and worship a mere man? It is quite enough to sicken one well nigh to death to read the fulsome paragraphs in the American press of the crowning of inherited kingship. What matters it that Alice Roosevelt is to witness the coronation of England's king? Why should this fact be told over and over again? Horace Mann once said that "it were more honorable to have been John Pounds putting new and beautiful thoughts into the minds of the ragged children of his neighborhood while he mended their fathers' shoes, than to have sat on the British throne." The insignia of state and the wild and senseless applause of the people can in no wise add to the man. While Prince Henry is to receive in this country all the honors that the American people can bestow, and while King Edward will have the world at his feet at the time of his coronation, the fact still remains that Christ made his entry into Jerusalem upon the foal of an ass. The greatness and nobility which overshadow all, and which come into closest touch with humanity, are always characterized by a touching simplicity.

UNRELATED POSITIONS.

There can be no good reason given why one may not fill two or even more public offices at one and the same time, provided those two or three positions are in no wise related to each other and with the further provision that the individual in question has sufficient time to give his varied duties. It is easy to understand why the offices of town clerk, treasurer and collector should not be united in one official department, for the above positions are all and each related to each other. Any school boy will readily understand why the collector of taxes should not become the guardian of the money he has collected. The one office must, or should, prove a check or surety on the other. But nothing of this holds between the office of assessor and that of selectman. These two offices are distinctly apart from each other. So that the candidacy of George I. Doe for re-election to the board of selectmen, while he is yet one of the assessors, is perfectly legitimate and in order; so there can be no reason why George I. Doe of Arlington, while also on the board of assessors is perfectly legitimate, and this thing is done all over the state, and the cry is used only as an excuse for ridiculing the town of an official. This cry is never made on its merits, but is a cloak for something else. It is yet early for the Enterprise to approve or disapprove candidates for town office, and it has no choice at the present time, but if a fight is to be waged against Mr. Doe, we suggest that real reasons be given instead of a flimsy makeshift. If you wish to oppose him, do so; but don't hide under a cloak. Give real reasons if there are any.

"VISITING DAY."

"Visiting day" for the public schools is a wise and profitable arrangement for both teachers and pupils. But why shouldn't this visiting day come, occasionally at least, to the man and woman who so incessantly labor in the household and on the farm? And this, too, with their "salaries continued"? We all need a breathing spell, and must have it, or otherwise we shall be likely to fall asleep at our post. It is your day, laborer who has the shorter end of the lever. He it is who must constantly keep his hand to the plough without once looking back. The mother who toils and slaves the very life out of her self and never gets a vacation. The husband and father who cultivates his broad acres seldom takes a day off. Why not even up things a bit, and so let some of the spare time of the clergyman's summer vacation go to the industrial classes? Why shouldn't the school teacher give a portion of his frequent outings to the man whose nose is continually on the grindstone? The truth is, and to our discredit it must be said, we have little care for that man and woman who do the most work. It would be a wise and humane arrangement if it could be somehow so planned that the day laborer should have his "visiting day." The man who bears "the burden and heat of the day" should have a chance more or less frequently to sit under the grateful shade of his favorite apple tree and while away the time while his pay goes on.

THAT TRAINING GROUND.

That familiarly known training ground in one of the most attractive localities of New England, and around which we have made our way so frequently by day and by night, and in all sorts of weather, gives us the above heading. The world at large is the training ground of all human kind, and the most of us are trying to get around it without going through it. This New England training ground to which we refer spreads itself out in an unique way almost in the very heart of a busy, enterprising city, so that during the warmer portion of the year it always invites the traveler to slacken his step, or to rest for a brief while under the grateful shade of its widespread trees. Now all this is pleasant and agreeable—but the query has occurred to us more than once as we have enjoyed our walks around this historic ground, how few men make their way with any degree of enthusiasm through the world's big training ground. There is a wide difference between going around the object one has in view and going through it. Going around is merely a superficial survey, while going through is to take in all the details. To know a thing is to take in all its parts. It is so easy to follow the open path, and see nothing and care for nothing beyond the narrow walk outside of your pleasure grounds. Through the world instead of merely around the world, man must go if he goes at all. To skip over the surface is to remain profoundly ignorant of the depths. For one to do his work, he must do it all through. The caption of the proposition is infinitely less than its demonstration. Man became a living soul only as he caught the breath and spirit of the Almighty. Previous to that time, he was only a form wrought in clay; simply outside work. Nothing is completed until it is completed from circumference to centre. You must not only go around the training ground, but you must go through it.

NOMINATIONS BY THE PEOPLE.

Let us have done with the slated, packed caucus, and in its stead allow the people to make the nominations. It is a headful sign that this naming candidates for office directly by the people is being discussed with a good deal of earnestness. The caucus has become a demoralizing power. In no way is it a substantial expression of the people. In its candidates are bought and sold with comparative ease, because there are so few with whom the deal is made. While it may be an easy matter for one to buttonhole the individual, it is well nigh impossible to buttonhole or hoodwink the people. Abraham Lincoln declared a fundamental truth when he said, "You may fool all the people a part of the time, and you may fool a part of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time." The only democratic way of doing things is to allow the people to do them. "Give the people power to act" should be the everlasting decree of the public. A packed caucus, or a packed business gathering of any kind, is always subversive of the principles of a pure democracy. Not only has the man of legal age and qualifications a right to vote, but he has an equal right to vote for whom he pleases. The caucus is a dead weight on the right of an intelligent suffrage. "This fixing things up" or preparing the "slate" has in many instances been carried so far that we have known certain committees in certain organizations to be practically shorn of power on account of the slate previously made. For instance, nominating committees are often selected for the apparent reason of naming candidates for the several positions to be filled, while as a matter of fact the said committees are nothing other than figureheads, the executive committee having previously and substantially made the nominations before the coming together of the nominating committee. This singular and ridiculous fact we mention as showing the farcical tendency of the caucus and the closeted committee. When God said "let there be light and there was light." He spoke it aloud and in the open day. What we need to do, is to do things in the open. "Get at the people" should be the cry all along the line. The people should do as little as possible by proxy. The American idea is, never send a boy when you can send a man.

The people, the people are the sovereigns; never fail to consult them at the start. Down with the caucus, and up with the public; so says the Enterprise.

There were only one hundred and sixty-eight babies born in Arlington during the year 1901. Now, as there are something like two thousand families in Arlington, it will be readily seen that more than eighteen hundred homes have been wanting, the past year, the joy attendant upon the coming of the "latest-born." Of these one hundred and sixty-eight babies, Father Mulcahy baptized one hundred and one of them, leaving only sixteen-seven to go into the homes of fifteen hundred Protestant families. May the Lord come more abundantly Arlington-way this present year, and may He graciously call at the homes of those who are so strenuously orthodox in the faith.

The Lenten season, or forty days of fasting, begins Wednesday, Feb. 12. This fast is said to have been instituted by Pope Telephorus. In early times, Lent commenced on Sunday. Fast was prohibited during Lent, but Henry VIII permitted the use of white meat by a proclamation in 1543 which continued in force until, by proclamation of James I in 1627 and again in 1631, flesh was wholly forbidden. Lent is very strictly observed throughout the Roman Catholic and Episcopal world.

"Come and make your home in my town," wrote the son to his father, "for small men get office here"; to which the father replied, "Never mind, my boy, for I am holding an office where I am."

Answer to prayer comes only to that man who is up and doing. "Give us this day our daily bread" means a hard day's work, and this, too, for six days in the week.

The brisk winter weather of the past two weeks or more not only makes ice, but it makes and stirs the blood. Youth is renewed with the glass approximating zero.

It is to be hoped that no one will make a klutson of himself during Lent. Sensible men and women eat to live, rather than live to eat.

Don't trust in the confidence of that man who talks in a half whisper. He will be likely to betray you to the first man he meets.

Don't forget that the annual town meeting occurs three weeks from Monday, March 3, in Arlington, Lexington and Belmont.

"You never can reason that out of the brain of another, which has not first been reasoned into it." So why longer try?

O, these self-satisfied men! How tired they make one!

"A SUCCESSFUL LIFE."

Rev. Dr. McKenzie, of Cambridge, preached at the Congregational church, Arlington, Sunday evening, under the auspices of the Cambridge Young Men's Society. After being happily introduced by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Bushnell, he proceeded in his own inimitable way to address the young men of the congregation. The simplicity and directness of his style are well known to all who have ever been wont to listen to his preaching, and when taken together with the kindly directness of his manner and the earnestness and earnestness of his diction they form at least part of the bond of sympathy which is immediately established between him and his hearers. The congregation was not large, but all were ready for his message.

His address was, as he himself said, more in the nature of an informal talk. It was woven about the word "success," the theme being expressible in the phrase "a successful life." In his introduction he gave several definitions of "youth," adding to them his own: "A man is young so long as he is willing to do a new thing, or an old thing in a new way." Such willingness is a sign of youth. Someone has defined the successful life as the life a man would be willing to live over again, but "a successful life" is the life his neighbors would like to have him live over again. It is a better way of putting it. The importance of death has been exaggerated. There is no word in the English language to express the passage of a successful life into the next life. Success does not depend upon anything a man may leave behind him; it depends upon those things which cannot be taken away from him. The world is a convenience, but it is not a necessity. The things of this world are not necessities, not even the brain. It used to be thought that the brain was necessary to the mind, but the latest scientific dictum about the brain is that it gets better when relieved of the brain. The brain is merely the sieve through which are sifted all things which are presented to the mind. Things will be clearer when the sieve is taken away. It is a false notion that a man must change when he enters the life beyond. Young men do as they please, but let them be something men part with the commandment of all things. Choose a business you would be willing to follow for a hundred years. The great economy of life is in a future existence goes on the same as in this life. The same principles of all future lives are of this. This world is a good place to get training for the next. Opportunities never come back. They must be seized by the foreigner, because they have a right to them which one's fingers will slip if one attempts to catch them from behind.

One great source of failure in life is change. If a man at the end of twenty years has changed the principles of his life, he is necessarily only partly successful. If at all. A man who changes his business three times and succeeds is a miracle. Men nowadays are careless in their choice of business, they change from one to another as chance offers. The only important thing in choosing your occupation, to be successful, is not to choose for immediate but for ultimate results. No man has a right to be a teacher or employer of others who cannot inspire them by his own work. For success we need to follow leaders, and chiefly the leader of all, Christ. Young people have a place now in the work of the church.

MILLIONS IN IT.

There appear to be millions of Valentines at the jewelry store of F. A. Smith, at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Myrtle street. There may be only a few thousand, but they are there, from all prices to all sizes. If a person cannot be satisfied with the assortment, he may truly be regarded as fastidious.

BEFORE THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Arlington Amateurs Give Vaudeville Show, and Score Marked Success—Symmes Hospital Fund Will Receive Goodly Sum.

Success crowned the efforts of the Arlington people who gave the amateur vaudeville entertainment at the town hall Wednesday evening, and the receipts of the performance which will go to the Symmes hospital fund will be exceedingly gratifying. The affair was well patronized, and the tickets were all sold long before the date of the performance.

The manner in which the respective numbers were rendered would have been a credit to professionals, and the fact that it was purely amateur, and the participants being well known, added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion.

It would be difficult to name those most worthy of favorable consideration for the parts they took but perhaps the one thing which was most appreciated, if such could be, was Miss Caroline Hilliard, as leader of Zouza's band, representing the well known Sousa of the band, which bears his name. Miss Hilliard was dressed after the flashy and stylish manner of the band man, and her whole appearance and movements were so natural that those who had seen the original declared it a perfect imitation. The band was the first number, with the selection "El Capitán." Miss Florence Spaulding, dressed as a fair Jap, made a hit in a Japanese love song, and Miss Mabel Kimball received a hearty reception after her song, "Sweet Charity." The chorus in this song was composed of Miss Clara F. Marshall, Miss Blanche Spurr, Miss Lillian Peck, Miss Marion Cushman, Miss Helen Wyman and Miss Edna Pierce.

Then came the song sheet, which was a success. A number of faces appeared through the apertures in a curtain and their owners joined in the choruses of the several songs. Harold Fay sang "Coon, Coon, Coon," Miss Mabel Kimball sang "Don't You Cry Ma Honey," and Miss Theresa M. Hardy in "Ain't Dat a Shame." Miss Hardy then performed the cake walk to the delight of the audience, and Mr. Marvin, Harold Fay and Miss Grace Dwyer joined in the cake walk at the close. Part two of the performance was a farce in two acts entitled "A Box of Monkeys." The roles were sustained by the following: Mrs. Onondaga Jones, Miss Alice W. Homer, Sierra Bengalline, Miss Blanche Spurr, Lady Guinevere, Landpoore, Miss Clara Taft, Chauncey Ogdendorpe, Harold Yeames, Edward Ralston, William D. Elwell.

In the first part of the entertainment the singers were attired in Tuxedo dress and made a most striking appearance. The young women sustaining the soloists in this part were Miss Alice W. Homer, Miss Helen Taft, Miss Annabelle Parker, Miss Grace Dwyer, Miss Edith Fay, Miss Marion Gray, Miss Theresa Norton, Miss Grace Peck, Miss Edna Pierce and Miss Florence Hill.

The entertainment was in charge of Miss Adele Fitzpatrick, assisted by Miss Marion Cushman, Miss Theresa M. Hardy, and musical director assisted by Frank Gray. W. H. W. Francis was stage director.

Dancing followed the close of the program and a large number remained until early hours. Refreshments were served.

The matrons were Mrs. J. Q. A. Brackett, wife of the ex-governor, Mrs. E. D. Hooker, Mrs. Waterman A. Taft, Mrs. T. Percy, Mrs. J. E. Kennedy, Mrs. C. A. Bennett, Mrs. Wellington A. Hardy and Mrs. W. H. Francis.

SLOD TOANE'S HORSE TALK.

There will be some fast trotting on Spy pond next week, as there are several races to take place.

Ben Pike is to have a special race with an Arlington friend, the best two in three half-mile heats, for a valuable purse.

The horses are in good shape and ready for fast work. Among those who took out this week were Chester Peck, with Young Clon (2:13 1/4); Selectman E. S. Farmer, with Journeyman (2:24); Dr. Alderman, with a bay colt that is good; E. J. McGrath had Mary M., Mr. Park-er of Bedford, bay colt; John Lyons had his bay mare out; Dr. Mayberry of Medford, black colt; M. Pero, of Lexington, bay colt.

N. J. Hardy has Libby P. (2:29 1/2) in good shape again.

G. A. Law is getting his roan pacer in shape to do some fast work next week.

MEAD—COLBERT.

The marriage of Miss Annie Clarissa Colbert to George F. Mead, took place at the St. Agnes parochial residence, Arlington, Wednesday evening. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Mead, and the bride a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Colbert. Rev. John F. Mulcahy, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The best man was a brother of the groom, James M. Mead, of Arlington, and the bridesmaid was Miss Eleanor W. Colbert, the bride's sister. The gown of the bride was of the mode of broadcloth, with white satin and valenciennes lace trimmings. She had a picture hat, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid wore green chaille, with a white insertion. She carried carnations.

After the ceremony a reception was held from 8 to 10 at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Colbert, of Kensington park. There were guests from Arlington, Lexington, Cambridge, Boston and other places. The ushers were Daniel B. Tierney, Frank Mead, William E. Mead, Albert J. Foweraker, James M. Mead.

The floral decorations were beautiful and in a pink and white effect. An orchestra furnished music. There were also mandolin and violin solos and duets by Misses Lucy and Rose Gethin, of Cambridge. William Kelly, Bert Powers, James H. Ford and James Mead contributed vocal numbers, and there were cornet solos by Miss Lillian Peck, of Cambridge. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Mead left on a two-weeks wedding trip and on their return will reside on Pine street, Arlington.

ANOTHER POLICE OFFICER.

In an interview with Matthew Rowe, on Wednesday, an Enterprise reporter learned that Mr. Rowe is of the decided opinion that Arlington's police force should have an additional man. Said Mr. Rowe, "I have been more than once at police headquarters when not a single member of the force was on duty, all being at the time engaged in duties outside, which demanded their attention. I have heard," continued Mr. Rowe, the telephone call in the police room when they were not off to answer the call. Now," said he, "let the town give without loss of time an extra man to the force and then purchase for police headquarters an ambulance wagon."

CHANGE OF RATE.

Owing to the increasing business of Mrs. Sophia North, who is engaged in treating all diseases of the scalp, she has decided to advance the rate charged for her visits to 50 cents. Her prices now are: Treatment at her home at 24 Central street, Arlington, 25 cents; visits, 50 cents; visits out of town, $1. Her telephone number is Arlington 25-4, and her hours at home are from 3 to 9 p.m. Mrs. North is having remarkable success in her treatment of the scalp, and in regard to the use of her oil, which is ready for her business, has obtained more than a local reputation.

OUR BIRDS AT HOME

By JAMES SPEED

III.—The Green Heron.

EARLY some morning about the middle of April, high overhead, you may hear a strange guttural squawk. It is the first pair of green herons come home from the south to keep house in the old orchard in the hollow. The birds have evidently done their love-making on the way from the south, for they go soberly to work repairing their rough nest of heavy twigs. It can hardly be called a nest. It is more of a loose platform of rough sticks, with hardly any depression in the center to hold their eggs. When you stand below the loosely made nest and look up through it, it is impossible to tell whether there are any eggs in it, as they show the same blue as the sky.

Like all migratory birds, these herons show great attachment for certain localities, and they return to these nesting places year after year. It is evidently the same feeling which characterizes man, the love of home. Why should not a bird have a strong attachment for the place where she rears her broods? Certainly no animal shows a greater love for its young than most of our everyday feathered friends, and what care they do take in making a secure cradle for their eggs!

The more I study Nature in her everyday life the more clearly I see that man is not so very different from the rest of animate beings. He has become higher, immeasurably higher, than our highest animals, but yet in the lower animals we see the budding of numbers of his traits of today. The devotion of the parents for their children and the love of home are considered as some of man's highest and best traits. They are among our feathered friends' best developed characteristics. The mother bird does not always wait until danger is very near. Often as you pass her nest she will feign lameness and lead you away from it. If danger comes very near her young, she will not hesitate to risk her life in an unequal fight. How these birds do love the home life that comes to them with each recurring summer!

The green heron usually breeds in old orchards where the trees are large. Often as many as six or eight nests will be found in a single orchard, not scattered about the place, but in neighboring trees near the center of the orchard. These small heronries are often as much as a mile from the nearest water course. One of these heronries, which I have noticed for the past fourteen years, has about six nests occupied each season. I usually pay them several visits every spring to take a look at their grotesque youngsters as they sit in the nests with their long legs doubled under them. Their long, slender bodies appear very thin, with their scant covering of feathers and long necks extended to take a good look at the intruder. Try to lift a bird from its roosting nest. Instantly its long, slender neck grasps the nest, and you desist for fear of pulling a leg off. With a nest containing from three to six young birds the herons are kept busy flying back and forth from the nearby water courses and ponds. Although their flight appears heavy and labored, they manage to make very fast trips. Their flight is that which is so finely depicted by the Chinese and Japanese artists.

The wing is always half bent, the neck folded back against the breast, and the long legs are stuck straight out behind. In fishing, this heron believes in patience. He will take his stand in some shallow bit of water and, with head drawn down upon his shoulders, seem asleep. Indeed he is so absolutely still that you might mistake him for an old piece of drift-wood sticking up out of the water. Take a peep at him with your glasses, and you will find that he is very busy watching every movement in the water about him. Not a ripple escapes his quick eye. Suddenly he unhinges his long neck, and with a quick lunge he has picked up a fish and is off for home with his prize. If the fishing becomes poor, he wades about in ponds and shallow swamps and picks up frogs and tadpoles for a living.

If you were to ask any country boy about green herons, he would not know what you were talking about, but ask the same boy if he has seen any "green herons," and he will answer you at once. This name, which is so expressive of the bird's habits, has become his common name all over the country.

When this heron is flushed from his station in or near the water, he gives his guttural squawk and flies, with extended neck, to some tree or snag overhanging the water. When he alights, he keeps his long neck extended that he may have a good look at you. Then, having satisfied himself that you mean no harm, he telescopes his neck, gives his tail a curious wag or two and settles himself comfortably to await developments. He appears to take life in a very serious manner and is never in a hurry about anything, not even his dinner, as he invariably waits for it to come to him.

This heron hardly needs any description, as he is so well known over the whole of the United States. The upper surfaces are green, with a bluish wash; under surfaces brownish ash, with white markings, the white becoming more prominent on the abdomen. The throat and neck are rich chestnut, mixed with white and dusky markings; bill, greenish black, with some yellow on the lower mandible. The eyes are yellow. The head of the adult has a fine crest, which is erected when the bird is alarmed. The total length of this heron is about seventeen inches.

On July 19 last I spent a part of the day wading about in a large swamp in Kentucky which covers about seventy-five acres. I had gone to this swamp without any definite aim, just to see what I might happen upon in the way of nest or young of some of our water birds. I took a companion and a camera with me that what we found might not be lost, for I did not care to shoot any birds for mounting at that season.

We had not waded very far along the edge in the shallow water when to my left I heard the alarm squawk of the green heron. As the sound came from the direction of a small clump of swamp ash trees, I surmised that the heron must have a nest there. I tried to push my way through the underbrush, but found it laced together with the long vines of the wild rose, so I had to take a rather circuitous route to reach the trees. When I reached the point which I had located, I found that I had made no mistake, for about ten feet overhead was a rough nest. As I approached, some young green herons climbed out of the nest and walked along the limbs.

Two or three seemed rather sluggish in their movements, but on my nearer approach they opened their mouths, and each disgorged a sunfish. Then they moved with greater ease. There were five young. Four kindly climbed out upon a horizontal limb and sat staring at us while we took a snapshot of the group.

After we had secured this picture we began wading again. For some time we found nothing but deserted nests of red wing blackbirds and flushed innumerable young at almost every step. Just as I pushed my way into a clump of cattails I flushed some birds and immediately commenced to look for a nest. I knew that these shy little waders bred here, but had never been able to find their nests. My attention was attracted toward a spot where the tops of the cattails appeared to have been bent down and found that these bent tops made a rough platform. As I got close the young birds dropped out of the nest and paddled slowly and awkwardly through the cattails. We hurried forward and after a chase secured them all and put them back in their nest. Before my friend could focus his camera they were out again, and we had our chase to repeat. This time I held them in my arms while my companion focused his camera on the empty nest.

When everything was ready, I replaced them and attracted their attention by waving my arms while my companion took a snapshot. Even then he was only able to get two birds in the picture, as the other two had dropped out behind for the third time. How these awkward, wading birds ever manage to climb back into their nests is a mystery, for the nest is about three feet from the water, and the stems and leaves of the cattails are very smooth and slippery. But I know now from observation that they do get back into their nests, for when in the course of an hour we came back by this same nest they again tumbled out and paddled slowly into the cattails.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 9.

Text of the Lesson, Acts iv, 32 to v, 11—Memory Verses, 3-5—Golden Text, Eph. iv, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.]

32, 33. "With great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all." In these days we can scarcely imagine several thousands of believers of one heart and one soul to serve the Lord, no one clinging to his own things, but each loving the other as himself and all having all things in common. If it was the power of His resurrection that did this, they must have known something that few know today.

34-37. Possessors of lands and houses sold their property and put the proceeds in the common fund that the need of each might be supplied and that no one might have any lack. There was no selfishness and no self seeking. This seems all the more remarkable when we consider the strife for pre-eminence that was seen more than once among the twelve before Jesus died; yes, even at the passover on the night before His resurrection, but now they were all filled with the Spirit, and hence this great difference.

A Spirit filled people will manifest the life of Christ and not the life of self. Jesus, surnamed Barnabas, son of consolation, a Levite, and evidently a true one, is mentioned as one of those who having land sold it and laid the money at the apostles' feet. Levi signifies "joined," and he illustrated the truth, "He that is joined to the Lord is one Spirit" (I Cor. vi, 17). Our Lord Jesus not only gave up all His riches and became poor to make us rich, but He actually gave Himself for us, taking the place of the guilty that we might be joined to Him (II Cor. viii, 9; Gal. ii, 20).

v, 2. "But Ananias and Sapphira." The tares and the wheat will grow together until the harvest. Until Jesus comes again may a bird will lodge in the branches, but no bird ever becomes a branch. The commands, "Walk before Me and be thou sincere" and "Thou shalt be sincere with the Lord thy God" (Gen. xvii, 1, margin; Deut. xxi, 13), are always binding, and "Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully" (Jer. xlviii, 10), seems to be always a necessary warning. When Abram and Sara agreed to act a lie and Isaac and Rebekah did the same (Gen. xii, 11-13; xx, 2; xxi, 7), which of us can say that the eyes as a flame of fire may not see some deceit in our inmost hearts? We are not our own, but bought with His precious blood.

3. 4. "Why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost? Thou hast lied unto God." See the oneness of the Father and the Spirit, for in lying to the Spirit they lied unto God. See also the oneness of the Spirit and the believer, for in lying to Peter and the others they lied unto the Spirit. Notice also that it was the work of the devil, the father of lies, in Ananias, the same adversary who in the garden of Eden led to Eve and has ever since been practicing his ungodly wiles. Contrast Peter filled with the Spirit and Ananias filled with Satan and the high priest and others filled with indignation or envy (chapters iv, 8, 31; v, 3, 17). If filled with the Spirit, evil can find no place in us. The Spirit of Truth and the father of lies each desires us, but neither can fill us unless we welcome them.

5, 6. Dead and buried in a few hours; gone from the earth and from his possessions, but gone where? To the true child of God death is gain and far better than sojourning here. But what of Ananias? His name means, "Jehovah is gracious." But did he know the saving grace of Jehovah? We know that there is such a thing as being saved as by fire, that Satan may destroy the flesh and yet the spirit be saved, that some of the members of the church were sickly and some dying because of sin and that we are told to judge nothing before the time until the Lord come (I Cor. iii, 15; v, 5; xi, 30; iv, 5), yet Rev. xxi, 8, gives us little hope for Ananias.

7, 8. "It was about the space of three hours after when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in." Three hours a widow, but not aware of it. How long they had journeyed together in these mortal bodies we do not know, but his journey has ended, and hers is about to, though she is all unconscious of it. Perhaps she had come seeking him, wondering why he delayed to return home. It is a sad story and should teach us to be sincere with God, who desires truth in the inward parts (Ps. li, 6). If we did not know that Peter was filled with the Spirit, we might feel like questioning his way with her and might wish that he had sought to lead her to repentance, but perhaps her heart was fully set in her to do evil (Eccl. vii, 11).

9, 10. "How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?" So one with God are His people that when we touch them we touch Him, and as we deal with them we deal with Him (Zech. ii, 8; Acts ix, 4). There is unspeakable comfort and yet a solemn warning in this great truth. How awful is this scene before us! She is for the first time told of her husband's death and at the same time told that she must die, and in a moment she is gone. In the morning they are in health, but united in a lie to God that they may appear before men to be very religious, but before night they are found out (Num. xxxii, 23), and are dead and buried. Two liars in one grave. But their souls—If not saved as by fire, then Luke xvi, 23, first clause, tells their fate. It was the hand of God, and the Judge of all the earth doeth right (Gen. xviii, 25; Rev. xvi, 3). See also Acts xii, 23; Jer. xxvii, 10, 17, and yet believe firmly that "God is Love" and "not willing that any should perish" (I John iv, 8; II Pet. iii, 9).

11. "And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things." It was a needed lesson for the times, and, although He does not always thus swiftly punish sinners, He always bates sin and tells us that he that telleth lies shall not tarry in His sight (Ps. ci, 7). We cannot but think of the swift judgment upon Aaron's sons at the beginning of God's dealings with Israel (Lev. x, 1, 2). If all liars in the church today and all ministers who use strange fire were thus summarily dealt with, there would be no end of funerals and a truly great fear upon many. Although God seems to keep silence concerning the corruptions and abominations in His professed people, He assures us that He will not always keep silence and that judgment must begin at the house of God (Ps. ii, 3; I Pet. iv, 17).

SOME GOOD GOWNS.

Velvet Costumes—Tuxedo Blouses and Homespun Hackabouts.

Much may be done with the velvets, now so reasonable in price and so modish, in the way of remodeling as well as for the trimming of new gowns and the making up of short jackets, as Vogue suggests in smart fashions for those of limited income. Some of these fashions, together with a cut, are here given.

Nothing proves more becoming or better answers all purposes of dress than a black velvet Eton, or coat, and at the same time it requires less expensive trimming. It would not be an expensive thing at present prices of velvet to buy enough for a skirt at the same time. Nothing looks worse than a cheap velvet of any color, so that this praise given is not for that sort, be it understood. As the combination of black velvet, taffeta and black cloth also is smartly worn, there are many who can further economize either by using what they have of silk or cloth and so lessen the yards of velvet required or purchase one or the other.

A velvet blouse is most convenient to wear and as youthful a suggestion to wear with separate cloth or silk skirts as can be given. But care should be taken to have it well interlined, both sleeves and bodice, and to furnish it with a fur collar of good width and have it long enough to enter the belt, assisting toward the long front line so modish. Its sleeves would be becoming if rather full, then drawn into a fur cuff lined with velvet, as then in cold weather this cuff may turn over the gloved hand, and when desired it turns back a fur cuff matching the collar. To complete this afternoon visiting or walking toilet a muff must be considered also. If you are using one of last season's, untrimmed with tails, by all means smarten it up by adding them and do the same to the collar in this way: Trim the outside edges of the collar, where the inside seams of the sleeves enter the arm rings, with a pair sewed together so as to hang easily. If there are short fur tabs added below the belt in front, trim them also with tails.

One of the new models of blouses, practical and simple, is dubbed the Tuxedo, and it bears unmistakably a close representation in its front revers to a man's Tuxedo coat. They are to be found in cloth and in heavy silk, with satin revers in all black. They have that severe tailor line, which some women prefer and affect, but are not so well suited to the fragile, more feminine type, who are at their best in sport pannes, cloths or flannels.

Homespun of the best quality make up exceedingly well for serviceable street wear. In steel grays, warmed up by tints of blue and orange in the underweaving, they are smart, or crimson and black. Among the numerous trimming braids one is sure to find something harmonizing with them, and braids are so very much used that there is the satisfaction, when so trimmed, that one has chosen the correct thing. When these braids are over an inch wide, they have tab effects given to them by pointing the end which does not join another braid. In fact, that old style of joining is the thing to avoid.

These homespuns look best when they have a second piece, so that a suit is formed. A Russian coat is the smartest winter model. No trimming is needed for the bottom of the basque. It gives the figure more height when there is no line of separation from the skirt.

Things That Are Told.

A diet of nothing but celery is said by some physicians to be a cure for both rheumatism and neuralgia. Free use of this vegetable is always recommended to rheumatic patients.

Baked potatoes are digested more easily than boiled potatoes and should therefore be preferred by dyspeptics.

In cases of anemia cabbages and spinach are distinctly beneficial. Spinach is also almost as valuable as lithia water in its effect on the kidneys.

Beets and turnips keep the blood pure and improve the appetite.

Tomatoes are thought in India to be a preventive of cholera. Like endive and water cresses, they stimulate the healthy action of the liver.

Onions are an admirable cure for sleeplessness and indigestion everywhere.

Too much meat and too few vegetables make up the average diet. Health depends on continuous variety.

A GENERAL AFTER STOCK TAKING CLEARING OUT OF THE ENTIRE STORE.
